Communities Around the World

People live in many different kinds of communities around the world. Some live in busy cities with tall buildings and lots of cars. Others live in small villages where everyone knows each other. In some places, homes are made of wood or bricks, and in other places, people build houses from mud, grass, or even ice! Even though communities look different, they all have things in common. People work, go to school, share food, and celebrate special days together. Learning about other communities helps us understand and respect people who live differently from us.

Answer the following questions.

1-What are two types of communities where people live?

2-Name one material people use to build homes.

3-What are two things all communities have in common?

4-Why is it important to learn about other communities?

5-Describe what your own community looks like.
